

Judy Winter is an award-winning writer and speaker whose work has helped create a new face for special needs children. When her son Eric was diagnosed at birth with cerebral palsy, Judy left a career in television to devote herself to giving him a better life. However, when looking for literature to help guide her, she was discouraged to find how little focus there was on the positives. She felt she owed it to Eric to fill that void. Judy began contributing columns and feature stories to local, statewide and national publications, addressing her own parenting challenges and highlighting the successes of others living with disabilities. When Eric unexpectedly passed away, Judy channeled her grief into her first book, Breakthrough Parenting for Children with Special Needs: Raising the Bar of Expectations. The book provides a road map for families facing the challenge of raising children with special needs. Judy continues to honor Eric by helping families realize what their child can do, rather than what they cannot.
